Therefore, it is of the utmost importance to us that all of the processes, from the selection and handling of the product, to packaging and transport, is managed in a manner that ensures the product is not contaminated by hazardous materials along the supply chain with the risk of harming animals or people. It is essential for us that food and feed safety is maintained at all times and that supplied products are according to order. Only in this way can we meet our customers' needs to strengthen food and feed safety.

Helm Skandinavien A/S is registered by the Danish Veterinary and Food Administration, our production is located in Hornslet and it is certified in accordance with ISO-22000 and FAMI-QS. This means that we are regularly checked by the authorities and by external auditors to ensure that we comply with food and feed legislation and the framework for the standards that we are certified under.

Helm Skandinavien A/S carefully selects suppliers and products and has risk assessed all of the processes with regards to purchasing, storing, mixing, diluting and transporting, to ensure that products are not contaminated during these activities.

We endeavour to avoid the recall of products, but should this prove necessary, we will communicate with the authorities and the relevant customers as quickly as possible, and be clear and open about the situation.

We work to ensure that when our customers use additives, processing agents and feed mixes that were supplied by us, there is a minimal risk of any contamination of their end product. We are committed to complying with food and feed legislation, and to meeting the requirements set out in agreements with our customers. We ensure that needed competences regarding food- and feed safety are available and we work constantly to improve safety via regular updates of our risk analyses, control of changes, evaluations of non-conformances and effective communication with customers and suppliers, so that we can remain a strong and safe link in the supply chain.
